March 2013

Dear Friends,

ELIAMEP has recently launched its new Crisis Observatory with the support of the Stavros Niarchos Foundation. This is the first initiative of this kind in Greece aiming at creating a unique point of reference for information, discussion and new research relating primarily to the Greek crisis but also covering the wider European one. The new website of the Crisis Observatory will be launched during this month.

ELIAMEP has also expanded its presence in international media. Its representatives and associates have contributed to newspapers such as Global Times, Le Figaro, Le Monde, The Guardian and The New York Times and news agencies like Associated Press and Deutsche Welle. Furthermore, they have participated at various international events. President of ELIAMEP, Professor Loukas Tsoukalis, for example, spoke in a conference exploring the place for Britain in the EU and the future of the eurozone with Vice-President of the European Commission Olli Rehn. Further to this, he talked in a symposium on the legacy of Constantinos Karamanlis along with major political leaders of the Hellenic Republic. For his part, Director General of ELIAMEP Dr Thanos Dokos explored the perspectives of the so-called Arab Spring in a conference at the University of Minho and discussed Greece's geopolitics in a working meeting organised by Control Risks.

If you are interested in our work in more detail you can visit our daily updated website. But here are the recent highlights of our conferences and publications:
